The Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) involves 12 member nations, but the Philippines is not yet a member. The TPP aims to reduce trade and investment barriers among its members, and the Philippines has expressed interest in joining. The TPP is seen as a significant step towards regional integration.

The vision is even more relevant today. In wider TPP, despite challenges, the Asia-Pacific free trade area is still more relevant today.